How To Create Successful Strategic Partnerships in an Era of Change

Financial services is in a time of rapid change – offering exciting opportunities and new challenges. Many large institutions struggle to take advantage of these opportunities. By forming successful partnerships with fintechs, institutions can gain technological expertise, deliver new products to market quickly, and enhance their customers' experiences; and fintechs can get the distribution and clients they need to grow their business.

What makes a successful partnership and how do you find partners that align with your goals and culture? This session will answer these questions using case studies from banks and fintechs who have successfully partnered to stay ahead of the competition.

Mark Bernhardt, General Manager, nCino
